The background of the slide is a traditional Chinese ink and wash painting, likely a 'Shan Shui' (mountain and water) or 'Wanwu' (all things) style. It depicts several white cranes with long necks and black-tipped wings, standing on a rocky, uneven ground. There are green pine trees and flowering plants, possibly peonies, scattered throughout the scene. A small red bird is visible in the upper left. The painting is framed by a deep red, scalloped-edge curtain that is pulled back to reveal the artwork. The text is centered over the painting in a brown, serif font.

C'est l'histoire d'un chinois qui s'est fâché avec sa femme.

Lui dit : sukitaki.

Elle dit : kowanini!!!

Alors à il lui replique :
toka anji rodi roumi yakoo!!!

The background of the image is a traditional Chinese painting, likely a silk scroll, depicting several white cranes with black wings and necks. They are standing on a rocky, uneven ground. There are green pine trees and flowering plants, possibly peonies, scattered throughout the scene. A small red bird is perched on a branch in the upper left. The painting is framed by a deep red curtain with a scalloped top edge and gold-colored trim along the folds. The text is centered over the painting.

elle s'asseyoit en le suppliant :
mimi nakoundinda tinkouji!!!!

The background of the image is a traditional Chinese ink and wash painting, likely a scroll, depicting several white cranes (likely herons or egrets) in various poses. One crane is perched on a rock, another is standing on the ground, and a third is in flight. The painting is framed by a deep red, scalloped curtain with gold-colored trim along the edges. The text is centered over the painting.

... il repond :
na miaou kina tim kouji !!!
